PARENTING

Family Meetings your Most Valuable Parenting Tool

Lora Ferguson

No matter your family's season of life, regular Family Meetings can create an anchor for building long term social and life skills for children. And for parents too! Join me to learn how Family Meetings can benefit your family starting today and for many years to come.

Parenting Tools for COVID-19: Building Connection and Resiliency in Difficult Times

Jody Malterre & Ari Hurtado

Come learn and practice some strategies to juggle the balance between work and home, especially while most kids are participating in digital learning. We will explore the three R's: How you can stay REGULATED, RELATE meaningfully with your kids, and REASON through the challenges. You will leave feeling encouraged and inspired.

SCHOOL

Barriers and Builders to Connected, Caring and Courageous Classrooms

Dodie Blomberg

Most successful and peaceful classrooms include a combination of skilled caring teachers, students with social-emotional skills, and a drive for connectedness. We will focus on all 3, examining teacher behaviors that are “barriers” or “builders” and on simple connection skills. Then we will put them all together in a class meeting format to be used online or in-person.

Significant Seven Perceptions and Skills - Empowering Beliefs that Help Children Succeed in School and in Life

Fernanda Lee

Through experiential activities and group discussions, we will cover topics such as self-regulation, ways to contribute in the classroom, and how emotions can help students understand how their behavior affects others. Learn practical tools to help students develop social and emotional skills online and in-person. You will walk away with three empowering beliefs and four empowering skills that help children succeed in school and in life.

EARLY CHILDHOOD

Using Positive Discipline Tools to Invite Cooperation, Teach Skills, and Promote Learning

Cheryl Erwin & Steven Foster

While guiding the behavior of two young children can be challenging, working with a group of them can be overwhelming! Our focus will be on understanding how development impacts behavior, setting appropriate limits, creating routines, and following through with kindness, firmness, respect, and dignity.

Circle Time Redesign: Using Positive Discipline to Prioritize Social Skills Practice and Community Building

Kelly Pfeiffer

Redesigning circle time with Positive Discipline in mind can open a world of possibilities. Traditional circle time appears to be a golden opportunity to practice and develop social-emotional skills but isn't always best for preschoolers who learn through their physical senses. We will put ourselves in their role to discover new ways to interact during group time so wear comfortable clothes.
